

TEACHING APPROACH

Jonathan Ingber maintains high expectations of his students and teaches in an atmosphere of social equality, mutual respect and encouragement. His teaching approach is twofold: As an experienced performer and educator, he offers real-world insights into the art of music performance as well as practical applications of music theory and history. He also firmly believes that learning itself is an art, and knowing how best to apply oneself is not only empowering but also is integral to effectively acquiring and honing skills.

Music instruction includes the study of:

- Technique and efficient Tone production
- Rhythm and Pitch accuracy
- Musicality, including Phrasing and Style
- Nuance and Individuality.

Concurrently, Mr. Ingber:

- Teaches the skills of self-evaluation, self-correction, prioritizing and time management
- Tailors his teaching to each student's unique needs, goals and learning style
- Encourages collaboration and cultivates self-motivation and self-reliance
- Fosters a climate where students can gain confidence and feel a sense of accomplishment, pride and ownership in their studies.
